

A Tremendous Engine of War—The Frigate—H.M.S. Dunderberg.

Mr. William H. Webb, the noted ship-builder, has in course of construction at the yard foot of Fifth Street, East River the greatest engine of naval warfare that has ever yet been constructed—an iron plated Monitor-ram, to be called the Dunderberg. Her dimensions will be: entire length, 378 feet; depth of hold, 82 feet; breadth of beam, 65 feet; draught of water, 19 feet. Her keel is very narrow, the under part of the vessel presenting a perfectly flat surface, about 20 feet in width. Her engines are to be of 6,000 horse power, and her tonnage measurement 7,000 tons. Her strength of build may be imagined when we state that her upper works, above the water line, will comprise 7 feet of solid oak, with an outer covering of four and a half to five inches of iron armor. Commencing at the water line, her bulwarks, (of the thickness just mentioned) incline inward at an angle of 45 degrees, and below the water line her hull inclines at the same angle towards the keel—thus presenting a seven feet ram on both sides along her whole length. Below the lowest point of this ram, her stock build inclines less acutely, (not more than five degrees), and is four feet thick of solid oak, covered to the depth of six feet by four inches iron plates. Her forward ram, which will be entirely submerged, is very sharp, about twenty feet long, and supported from the bow of the vessel, inwards, by about thirty feet of massive oak timbers. The officers quarters, unlike those in the Monitor rams, are all above the water line. Her movements are of the character of one ram on each side of the keel, while the stern extends about twenty five feet beyond them, thus completely submerging the propellers and making it impossible for an opponent's shot to injure them. The Dunderberg will also be provided with two rudders, so that if the steering apparatus of one should be injured the other can be immediately put into operation.

It is the largest, heaviest, strongest iron frigate afloat, while at the same time, she will be the "toughest customer" for rebels or invaders to try their metal with. She was originally designed for harbor defence; but combines within herself all the requisites of a thorough going sea steamer and will prove as effective on the wide ocean as when guarding a sea port. She will be completed in about six months' time. New York Times.

The Grand Union Rally in Cincinnati.
A special dispatch to the State Journal dated Cincinnati, Feb. 23d, gives the following account of the enthusiastic proceedings of the people of the Queen City:

The Union meeting at Pike's Opera House to-night was the largest one of modern times. Thousands were unable to get inside; in consequence, another meeting was called at Melodeon Hall. Hon. W. S. Groves was elected chairman. There were present, Messrs. Morton and Tod, Ex-Governors Dennison and Wright, Gen. Wallace, Rufus King, and 5,000 men—no women. The introductory speech was made by Hon. W. S. Groves; after which Rufus King read six sound Union resolutions, endorsing the prosecution of the war, which were unanimously adopted. Next, Hon. Henry Stansbury made a thoughtful, terse, eloquent, and traitor-banging speech.

Governor Morton, amid prolonged cheers, came forward and spoke an hour, with burning denunciation of an armistice and compromise with traitors, and the secession of New England or the Northwest. Gov. Tod made the speech of the occasion; he glorified the soldiers; lauded the old Democracy, and said he told Yancey in the Charleston Convention of 1860, to "secede and be damned." Prolonged cheers.

Dr. Wright read loyal letters from Colonel Gilbert, Colonel and Stanley Matthews, and Gen. Rosecrans, and others.

Next Gov. Wright made a beautiful and patriotic address.

This meeting poured oil on the fire that shall burn up treason.

"Sweet" On Jewett.
The Ohio Eagle (Turkey-buzzard) is particularly sweet on Jewett. The Eagle is the institution that stands charged with the special duty of bearing aloft the standard of Dr. Olds (ears and bars) and is a most violent and frenzied Copperhead. Of course the Eagle is a Vallandighammer of the grandest plummage; and aims to make that chief of Copperheads the next Democratic (!) Governor of Ohio. In that aim this Eagle must needs dispose of Judge Jewett, whose some people talk of nominating, and does so by asserting, with all the topographical grandeur of Signor Don Pronunciamento, that the "Democratic party will not vote for Jewett; they would prefer to vote for an open Abolitionist rather than a disguised Abolitionist; and they would sooner vote for the devil than to vote for Jewett."

We have for some time had an impression that the devil would prove a very acceptable candidate to the Copperhead faction of the Democratic party; and it is now evident that if the devil, the first secessionist, comes into the Copperhead convention for nomination, he will be accepted before Judge Jewett. For hath not the mouth of the Eagle spoken it?

Returning Evil for Good.
The Atlas brought intelligence that the British Secretary of War had forwarded instructions to the commanders of the batteries on each side of the Mero, and of her Majesty's ship Majestic, to the effect that when the American ship George Griswold, with provisions for the Lenoire, off-shore enters the river, a salute of 21 guns should be fired from each battery, and a salute of twenty-one guns from the Majestic. This is the good and pleasant side of the picture. The dark and evil reverse is as follows from the Dublin Freeman, which says:

On Friday last about two o'clock, a small looking steam steamer named the Georgina, arrived at Holyhead from Liverpool for a supply of coal. The craft is a tender to the well-known Alabama, and laden with arms and ammunition. She has crew of sixty men, all picked, consisting of English, Irish, Scotch, and Welsh. They are bearded and most ferocious looking fellows. She has a large quantity of iron and other necessities on board for the Alabama, and carries twenty-eight guns. It is found for Memphis, her crew having signed articles for that port, and will probably run the blockade in Charleston. She left Holyhead on Saturday.

A gentleman residing near Syracuse, New York, has a family that will do to brag on. It consists of two daughters and four sons. The aggregate weight of the sons is eight hundred and eighty-eight pounds. The "girl" weighs one hundred and thirty pounds, and the father about two hundred and sixty.

A Spectacular Effort—The Best of the North.

How is a rare bit of description for the special benefit of the Copperheads of the North—they who make out of a support of the Government, and sting the hand that has protected and maintained them. It could have been done better by one of themselves. Green or Riker could get a more sparkling likeness. But the sole beauty does not consist in the portraiture—the description of the estimate in which they are held is equally good. We hope the Copperheads will read and ponder. It will afford them extreme gratification to know that they are so well appreciated by both sides. They are half-way men, cowboys, Tories, and detestable raking which the Richmond Enquirer gives them, as follows:

"We all know, indeed, and are happy to know, that some of the Northwestern States are very sick of this war, heartily disaffected to the Washington Government, strongly disposed to sneak out of the debt they have incurred, and to seek alliance, or even union, with the Confederacy, if agreeable. This is a wholesome state of feeling, and must produce its fruits of disorganization and discouragement in the Northwestern troops. But let us not mistake the matter. Not one of those States has yet pronounced itself in this sense, though some stump orators have. When they do take such action—that is, when they take such action as to make treaties with them, but that as to an union with the Confederacy, under the 'old flag,' or any other, they come two years too late. Two years, and an abyss of horror and hatred, and the blood of our slaughtered brothers, crying aloud from the ground, all prohibit that impious union. If they repudiate the debt they have contracted, and abandon the Government they have established, and recant the vows, and pledges, and eat dirt, it is well; we shall be charmed; the movement will suit us perfectly; and, although we shall not exactly respect the actors in that affair, yet we shall not be unwilling to trade with them—Alding our nose a little—and to show them all suitable civilities—but at a proper distance."

Singular Coincidence at Galveston.

A Richmond correspondent of the Charleston Mercury relates the following incidents of the capture of the Federal fleet at Galveston:

"Dr. Holland, of Texas, who bore a useful and distinguished part in the recent capture of the Harriet Lane, at Galveston, arrived in town the day before yesterday, bringing with him the signal book which was taken by the gallant Leon Smith in that splendid engagement. This book is worth perhaps, more to the Confederacy than all the prizes that were secured, even more, possibly, than the prestige of the victory. It was found upon the dead body of Commander Wainwright, and was worn by him, in the breast pocket of his coat, where it was pierced by the bullet of a navy revolver, discharged by Capt. Smith, whose second fire killed his antagonist. Dr. Holland was one of the boarding party that cleared the decks of the Harriet Lane. Some of the strange incidents he describes transcend in strange interest the narratives of Alexander Dumas.

Some years ago when the famous steamer Merrimack, afterwards changed into a ram by the Confederate Government, made her trial trip across the Atlantic, she entered, as we all remember, Southampton waters, and her officers were received with great hospitality by the authorities of Southampton. Commander Wainwright was then the Merrimack's First Lieutenant and on going up to London was entertained by Dr. Holland, who was then living in the great metropolis. The Doctor never saw him again alive, and recognized with a feeling of astonishment in the dead body of the commander of the Harriet Lane, lying upon her decks, his guest of some years ago, in London. The subject of all the terrible tragedies of this infernal war was enacted upon the same crimsoned and slippery stage, when Major Lee, of the Confederate Army, encountered, in the dying Lieutenant of the Federal steamer, his own son! Can history or fiction afford any parallel to this? It is a curious fact, too, which has not been stated that Capt. Leon Smith, to whose skill and gallantry General Magruder attributes the entire success of the attack on the enemy's fleet in the Galveston Bay, is the brother of Caleb B. Smith, until very recently the Secretary of the Interior in Lincoln's Cabinet."

The Quakers at the South.

In common with the Reformed Presbyterians, the Wesleyans, and other sects holding slavery in abhorrence, the peaceful Quakers at the south have been subjected to a great deal of suffering from the rebels. The Quakers are quite numerous in North Carolina, and the Philadelphia Friend's Review states that the conscription law has been enforced with much rigor, and that many Friends have been taken to the rebel camps, and have been persecuted in other respects. It is estimated that over five hundred members of the Society have fled from North Carolina to the free States since the breaking out of the rebellion, and in many cases their property has been confiscated.

The Free Press residing in the Confederacy now pay subject to a tax of $200 each as the price of exemption. At their yearly meeting in North Carolina they decided that they could not conscientiously pay this special tax, it being imposed upon them on account of their principles. The Friends maintained their consistency in the face of danger at the same meeting by renewing their testimony against slavery and slave labor.—Cleveland Herald.

Arbitrary Arrests by Gen. Washington.
In an admirable work on "The Trial of the Confederation," Edward Fisher mentions an interesting case which occurred at Philadelphia, in 1777. Some twenty gentlemen, of high respectability, were arrested by order of the Supreme Executive Council of the State, at the instance of Congress, and detained to a town in Virginia, and there banished. They were not treated as criminals, but with consideration and kindness. Those who chose to declare their allegiance to the Government were released, and all were permitted to return to their homes when it was thought they could no longer be dangerous. These arrests were made with the knowledge and approbation of Washington. A writ of habeas corpus was issued at the instance of the prisoners, but it was disregarded by the officer in charge of them, and soon afterward, September 16, 1777, the Legislature passed a bill in denouncing the Executive Council, and suspending the writ of habeas corpus.
